THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE, USDA, TENNESSEE STATE UNIVERSITY, AND COUNTY GOVERNMENTS COOPERATING

FOREWORD

On May 8, 1989, the Extension System celebrated the 75th Anniversary of the signing of the Smith-Lever Act by President Woodrow Wilson. That act, passed by the United States Congress in 1914, established the Cooperative Extension System, a uniquely American institution. The Smith-Lever Act has been amended frequently and was rewritten in 1953. However, its statement of the basic purpose of Cooperative Extension remains the same:

"To aid in diffusing among the people of the United States useful and practical information on subjects related to agriculture and home economics, and to encourage the application of the same."

On July 1, 1914, the College of Agriculture of the University of Tennessee and the USDA, cooperating under the provisions of the Smith-Lever Act, organized a Division of Extension, now known as the Agricultural Extension Service.

The reason for Extension's existence today is the same as it has been for 75 years -- to deliver effective educational programs to serve the needs of our clientele. Our programs are dynamic. Our clientele or the people in our audience are a passing parade, and our subject matter changes with new research and with the needs of our clientele. In addition, the Extension team members change through professional growth and with departures from and additions to the team.

After 75 years of serving the Tennessee public, the Agricultural Extension Service has become an essential resource for Tennesseans in solving problems and developing leadership and life skills related to youth, family, community, agriculture and natural resources. This role will continue. The tools of the trade will change. The research-based information will change. The priority of problems to be solved will change. But, Extension will be needed. To cope with and adjust to the needs of tomorrow, we must keep our mission clearly in mind, have confidence in ourselves, know our subject matter, and continue to add to our knowledge.

Extension will not survive on the basis of memories in the hearts and minds of the farmers and their families of this country who have benefited from Extension programs over the past 75 years. Tomorrow, as today, Extension programs live and breathe in the lives of those people who are currently improving the way they live and make a living as a result of Extension education.

For tomorrow, as for the past 75 years, education is the mission, but it is never completed. Our people -- both young and older -- and those of future generations need us and the great institutions we serve.

The Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service has an enviable record of success, and we are recognizing that with our 75th Anniversary Celebration. Thomas Jefferson put the past in perspective when he wrote, "I like the dreams of the future better than the history of the past."

M. Lloyd Downen

Dean, Agricultural Extension Service

August, 1989

DEDICATED to the Deans and Directors of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service who have served with vision, courage, pride and distinction throughout the 75-year history of the organization.

PROFILES OF LEADERSHIP

DR. CHARLES ALBERT KEFFER was a natural choice for the first director of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service. As a noted authority on horticulture and landscape design, he came to the University of Tennessee in 1900 as head of the horticulture department. From an organization of less than 40 employees in 1914, Dr. Keffer saw his staff grow to almost 500, including officials, specialists and county agricultural agents in all 95 counties, home agents in 70 counties and 4-H Club agents in 62 counties. He passed away on December 30, 1935. As a lasting tribute to his contributions to the rural people of Tennessee, the 4-H Club boys and girls chose his name for the battleship launched under their sponsorship in June 1944.

DR. C. E. BREHM, who had served as assistant director for 15 years, became the second director following the death of Dr. Keffer. Dr. Brehm joined the Extension Service in 1917 as a marketing specialist. His first work was the formation of cooperative wool marketing pools, which still function successfully in the state. Through his training and great understanding of farm and home problems, and his well known organizational skills, he was popular throughout the South. He served from 1936 until his appointment as President of the University of Tennessee in 1948.

DR. J. H. McLEOD became director of the Extension Service in 1947 and served for 10 years. He joined the staff in 1921 as a swine specialist. His outstanding work in two-litter development and later as coordinator of the AAA corn-hog program is legendary. He was largely responsible for setting up the cooperative Extension-TVA Test Demonstration Program in the 1930s. His work in agricultural economics and program planning gained wide recognition. Because of his long association with Extension work and his broad knowledge of agricultural conditions, he rendered a wide service to the farm people of Tennessee.

DR. VERNON W. DARTER succeeded Dr. McLeod as the director of Extension in 1957. He had previously served as a county agent, and professor and leader of the Extension Training and Studies department which he organized at UT. In June 1968, his title was changed to Dean of Agricultural Extension. Under his leadership, professional competency of personnel was greatly improved. Nearly half of the county agents acquired advanced college degrees and more than half of the state specialists held Ph.Ds. The administrative staff was reorganized under his direction, with more emphasis placed on educational programs in agriculture, home economics and youth at the county level. Dr. Darter retired in June 1972.

DR. WILLIAM D. BISHOP was named dean of Extension in 1972. He had received a Master's Degree from the University of Tennessee in 1954 and was appointed associate agronomist. After earning the Ph. D. from Purdue University, he was promoted to head of the agronomy department. Two years later he was named state leader of Extension agricultural programs. Under Dr. Bishop's leadership the Extension Service continued to grow, especially through widespread development of soil testing and increased activity in 4-H Club programs. He retired in March 1977.

DR. M. LLOYD DOWNEN is the present dean of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service. He assumed his duties in 1977 after having served as professor and leader of the Extension agricultural economics department, and as assistant dean for five years immediately prior to his present position. He is recognized nationally for his administrative skills. Consequently, he has served on many advisory boards and councils, including the National Extension Committee on Organization and Policy (ECOP) and the National 4-H Council Board of Trustees. He was selected by his peers to chair the Southern Directors Association. He has emphasized balanced programming among the Agriculture, Home Economics, 4-H and Community Resource Development components.

During his administration, Dr. Downen has led Tennessee's 4-H Club program to an unprecedented 10 years with more national project winners than any other state in the nation. Under his leadership, the Agricultural Extension Service programs are helping farmers and farm families in Tennessee meet the social and economic crisis which they face in a changing agricultural economy. As dean, Dr. Downen has seen the Extension Service come to a crossroads in a changing agricultural environment, both in Tennessee and in the nation. He is now addressing the issues that will face our society not only today, but long into the 21st century.

THROUGH THE DECADES

On May 8, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson signed the Smith-Lever Act which legally established the Extension Service as the educational branch of the United States Department of Agriculture. The Extension Service of today continues to be a unique nationwide system, guided and funded by a partnership of Federal, State and County governments. It is an organization with a proud past and a promising future.

1910's THE POVERTY YEARS

- * Poverty takes hold in rural America.
- * Girls' tomato clubs and boys' corn clubs meet for the first time.
- * Extension hires its first Home Economics Specialists.
- * World War I begins (1917).
- * Extension works to improve food production and food preservation.
- * America's new slogan is, "Food Will Win the War."
- * Agents teach canning, butter making, bread baking and poultry care.
- * Agents organize clubs to reach many more families with educational information.

1920's THE PRE-DEPRESSION YEARS

- * Farm prices crash, causing economic problems for farmers.
- * The Division of Extension changes its name to the Agricultural Extension Service.
- * Farmers realize that prosperity will depend on the use of modern farming methods.
- * The first 4-H Club camps open their doors to American youth.

1930's THE LEAN YEARS

- * Economic depression sweeps the nation.
- * Extension formulates relief programs to counteract rapidly falling prices.
- * Agents teach home and money management.
- * The cotton market slumps during a high-yield year. Agents respond by teaching families how to use surplus cotton to make mattresses.
- * Extension agents conduct a massive meat canning program which makes use of surplus meat and saves grain.
- * Farmers diversify and grow strawberries, tobacco and capons for special markets.
- * Farmers begin to use new phosphate fertilizers, developed by the Tennessee Valley Authority.
- * Thousands of Tennessee farm families wire their homes for electricity.

1940's WORLD WAR II

- * Extension organizes a system of neighborhood leaders who deliver urgent war information to farm families.
- * Neighborhood leaders inform rural families of the nation's need for products and resources such as: scrap rubber, iron, enriched flour and increased war bond sales.
- * Extension organizes groups to discuss critical issues, including: wartime farm policy, farm equipment sharing and fire prevention and control.
- * Communication by radio and telephone becomes available to virtually everyone, partially because of work done through the neighborhood leader system.
- * The "frozen food revolution" begins after the War with the opening of cooperative community freezer plants. Agents have the opportunity to teach proper freezing methods.
- * Extension helps Young Farmers and Homemakers organize into an effective group.

1950's THE PROSPEROUS YEARS

- * Technological advances bring to the farm improved hybrids, new varieties, high analysis fertilizers and artificial breeding techniques.
- * Extension home economists diversify into new areas, such as consumer education.
- * The urban consumer welcomes a new audience for Extension information.
- * Marketing and distribution of commodities takes on increased importance.
- * Weed control in field crops begins to change from hand and machine cultivation to herbicide use.
- * Farmers switch from hand harvesting of crops to using combines.
- * Farm families actively seek out information about modernizing equipment, improving farm management techniques and upgrading livestock.
- * The new emphasis in 4-H Club work is on project-related activities.
- * The Tennessee 4-H Club Foundation is organized to support 4-H through private funding.

1960's THE TURBULENT YEARS

- * As a result of societal changes, Extension's audience becomes more diverse.
- * Agricultural agents teach farmers scouting techniques which help establish an "economic threshold" before spraying crops for insect and disease control.
- * The Expanded Food and Nutrition Program helps improve diets of lower income families.
- * Tennessee farmers focus on marketing commodities such as timber, feeder calves and feeder pigs.
- * Extension places a renewed emphasis on consumer education.
- * Agents help farmers' group meetings become better organized and more focused on the real needs of farmers. New opportunities emerge, as the statewide Farm Management Schools.
- * 4-H continues to be project-oriented. New projects include: horse, dog, automotive, personal development and photography.

1970's THE YEARS OF ACCOUNTABILITY

- * Economic conditions lead to the "back-to-basics" movement in Extension.
- * Extension programs focus on timely issues such as the new technologies, the energy crisis, inflation and family stress.
- * The increased use of print and electronic media gives Extension the ability to reach larger and more diverse groups of people.
- * Enrollment in the 4-H Club programs reaches a new high as National 4-H Club Congress winners exemplify all that's best in American youth.
- * Extension responds to clientele needs through an increased emphasis on family life education programs, including child development, parenting, and family relations.
- * Consumers express a new interest in nutrition and food safety. Extension responds with programs geared to consumer needs.
- * Farm exports increase sharply as farms gain in acreage.
- * Farm income becomes highly variable.

1980's THE MOVE TO ISSUE-BASED INTERDISCIPLINARY PROGRAMS

- * Extension programs continue to benefit from the use of mass media, including video conferencing.
- * Helping families deal with stress becomes a top priority of the Extension Service.
- * The uncertain economy and tightening federal budget prompt Extension to take a fresh look at program priorities.
- * Teams of volunteers and Extension staff teach leadership techniques statewide through the Family Community Leadership program.
- * Net farm income declines sharply in mid-decade; this leads to a financial crisis for many farm families.
- * Farmers start using the MANAGE program, an intensive educational package which teaches financial management, family economics and stress management.
- * Extension programs continue to place a strong emphasis on consumer education.

1980's (continued)

- * Tennessee takes part in the 4-H LABO Exchange Program, in which Tennessee 4-H Club families host Japanese young people and 4-H Club members, in turn can visit Japan.
- * The Tennessee Extension Homemakers Council organizes and is granted membership in the National Extension Homemakers Council.

1990's NEW OPPORTUNITIES

- * Extension programs focus on the "Initiatives" -- critical issues facing the people of Tennessee now and into the 21st Century.
 - * Competitiveness and Profitability of Tennessee Agriculture
 - * Alternative Agricultural Opportunities
 - * Water Quality
 - * Conservation and Management of Natural Resources
 - * Revitalizing Rural Tennessee
 - * Improving Nutrition, Diet and Health
 - * Family and Economic Well-Being
 - * Building Human Capital
 - * Youth at Risk
- * Through the use of electronic technology, the Extension system will be more efficient than ever in delivering educational programs to the people it serves.

EXTENSION WORKER'S CREED

I BELIEVE in people and their hopes, their aspirations and their faith, in their right to make their own plans and arrive at their own decisions; in their ability and power to enlarge their lives and plan for the happiness of those they love.

I BELIEVE that education, of which Extension work is an essential part, is basic in stimulating individual initiative, self-determination and leadership, that these are the keys to democracy and that people, when given facts they understand will act not only in their self-interest, but also in the interest of society.

I BELIEVE that education is a lifelong process and the greatest university is the home; that my success as a teacher is proportional to those qualities of mind and spirit that give me welcome entrance to the homes of the families I serve.

I BELIEVE in intellectual freedom to search for and present the truth without bias and with courteous tolerance toward the view of others.

I BELIEVE that the Extension Service is a link between the people and the ever-changing discoveries in the laboratories.

I BELIEVE in the public institution of which I am a part.

I BELIEVE in my own work and in the opportunity I have to make my life useful to mankind.

Because I BELIEVE these things, I am an Extension worker.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Appreciation is expressed to the following people or groups who have contributed time and talent in the preparation of this historic document:

ADMINISTRATORS

The awesome responsibility for providing effective, fair and acceptable leadership has been in the capable hands of competent administrators throughout the history of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service.

The growth and accountability of the organization is a tribute to the men and women who have served in the various administrative positions. Their execution of duties, protection of the organizations' reputation, encouragement of professional growth of the staff, proper use of public funds, sensitivity in the selection of personnel and commitment to the mission of Smith-Lever, which mandates specific actions, has resulted in a record of achievement, service and accrediblility.

Under the leadership of people whose names are listed on the following pages, the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service takes pride in the past and looks forward to a promising future.

DISTRICT SUPERVISORS

From the very beginning, district supervisory personnel have been the pivotal point of the Extension Service organization. As administrative liaison between the dean's office and the county staff, they have led with a dedication equal to none.

Originally, the state was divided into four districts. As shifts in population took place, highway and rural road systems improved, industry and commerce spread across the state, the counties were redistributed and a fifth district was created.

Prior to 1961, each district staff was composed of two district agents...one in home economics and one in agriculture. A reorganization of the administrative structure resulted in adding a third person at the district level and changing the titles to District Supervisor and Associate District Supervisor. Thus, more time was allocated for personnel administration, program planning and implementation.

The longevity and stability of the district personnel is a tribute to the dedication and professionalism of those who have served at the district level. Their finesse in guiding the development of the county staff in program delivery is the bulwark and pride of the organization.

SPECIALISTS

"Teacher of teachers," specialists are highly trained to measure the pulse beat of state, national and global technology in their selected fields of expertise. Through their interpretation of research and its application to Tennessee farm conditions, they work with the county staffs in the dissemination of practical and useful information to the rural families of this great state.

The Great Depression, World War II, the creation of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and a changing economy are all reflected in the constantly changing roles of the specialists down through the years. The following roster of specialists is reflective of Extension's versatility in adapting programs to serve the needs of its clientele.

During this 75th Anniversary year, the Tennessee Extension Service takes pride in honoring the men and women who have served as subject-matter specialists.

SECRETARIAL, CLERICAL AND SUPPORTIVE STAFF

Across the state and across the 75-year span of time that marks the anniversary of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service, vast numbers of loyal and caring secretaries, clerical workers and other supportive staff have played a vital role in the history of the organization.

Unfortunately, no adequate records are available to establish the service of these important individuals. Although they must remain nameless, their contribution to the vitality, public image, accountability, public service and assistance to the professional staff is immeasurable. The organization simply could not have existed without their talent, expertise and dedication.

It is with a great deal of gratitude and appreciation that we pay tribute to this elite group of Extension employees.

COUNTY EXTENSION AGENTS

Since the establishment of the Extension Service in 1914, the county Extension agents working in agriculture, home economics, community resource development and 4-H Club work have been the backbone of this unique educational system.

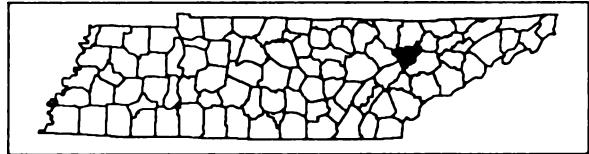

From the days of the horse and buggy to the present era of space exploration and technological explosion, they have developed and delivered timely educational programs, offered advice and practical information, given counsel and encouragement, and extended the hand of friendship to the rural and urban families of Tennessee.

Area agents working in Test Demonstration Resource Management, Pest Management and Community Resource Development have been important contributors to the educational programs in many counties. If area agents names are omitted from some counties, the omission is not intentional.

Agents are listed according to major subject matter area without differentiating between adult or youth program responsibility.

The Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service is proud to present this roster of Extension agents who have given unselfishly of their time and talents for the betterment of farm and family life. They are examples of "professionalism personified."

ANDERSON

Nuclear energy has played a major role in the development of the county. The Manhattan Project and Oak Ridge are famous for the development of the radioactive heart of the atomic bomb. The county was named for Joseph Anderson, one of the three Federal judges in the Territory South of the Ohio River from 1791 - 1796.

CARTER

Carter County has one of the few remaining covered bridges in this area of the country. Designed by Colonel Thomas Matson and built in 1883 at a cost of less than $6,000, it is used to carry traffic across the Doe River. The county name is in honor of Landon Carter, son of an important early pioneer. The county seat, Elizabethton, was named after Carter's wife, Elizabeth.

CHEATHAM

The "Narrows of Harpeth" is a neck of land several hundred yards long that is the beginning of the Harpeth River. The "narrows" reverses itself and descends 17 feet in a graceful loop around the limestone ridge. The county seat of Ashland was named for the trees which dominated the nearby forests. The name was changed to Ashland City in 1858.

CHESTER

Local folklore says that Chester County was good hunting ground for the Chickasaw Indians, and hundreds of arrowheads and chipped stones have been found in the area. Henderson, the county seat, was first called Dayton, but the name was changed to Henderson Station during the Civil War. Growing roses has become a popular interest in recent years and adds to the natural beauty of the county.

CLAIBORNE

The gateway to the land west of the Appalachians, Cumberland Gap was first discovered by Thomas Walker, later made famous by Daniel Boone. The rugged and beautiful county is named for Virginia aristocrat William Claiborne. Tazewell is the county seat. Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate has the largest collection of historical Lincoln treasures in the United States.

COCKE

Tomatoes are an important crop in Cocke County, bringing growers approximately $5 million annually. Over 400 producers and almost 900 acres are devoted to growing tomatoes for the fresh market. The Stokely brothers started a cannery in 1903. Cocke County was given its name from William Cocke, a native Virginian. He was an early politician in the area that was first North Carolina, then the State of Franklin, then Tennessee. Founded in 1797, the county seat is Newport.

CROCKETT

The frontier symbols of coonskin cap and long rifle honor the county's namesake, Davy Crockett, famous for his courage and concern for his neighbors. Alamo is the county seat. The county is relatively new in Tennessee history, founded in 1871. It leads the state in yields per acre of cotton.

CUMBERLAND

Cumberland County was one of 102 national New Deal communities in the 1930s with government-sponsored housing projects providing employment during the Great Depression. Over 200 of the 256 stone homes, known as the "Cumberland Homesteads," still stand in silent testimony to the perseverance of the independent homesteaders. The Duke of Cumberland was the inspiration for the county name. Wildlife management areas and resorts attract many visitors.

DAVIDSON

Upon selection of Nashville as the permanent capital of the state in 1843, Nashville purchased the site known as Campbell's Hill for $30,000 and donated it to the state for the Capitol building site. William Strickland, an assistant architect of the national Capitol in Washington, was selected to build the State Capitol building from marble quarried in the Tennessee hills. Labor was done by convicts and slaves for occupation in 1853. Davidson County is home to the country music industry, the Parthenon and the Hermitage.

DECATUR

The extensive deposits of limestone in the area have created the natural wonder of many caves, for which the county is well known. The abundant natural deposits of phosphate, chert, limestone, river sand and gravel provide a prosperous mining income for many residents. The county seat is Decaturville.

DEKALB

From 1940 through the early 1960s, DeKalb County was one of the regions known as the "fruit capital of the world." Fruit trees continue to be a primary source of income for the county through mail orders. The county was named for Baron DeKalb, a Bavarian who fought for American independence in the Revolutionary War. Smithville is the county seat.

DICKSON

The Dickson County Courthouse is reported to be the oldest courthouse still in use in the state; it was constructed in 1806 and rebuilt in 1931. The first iron furnace in Middle Tennessee was built in 1793 to take advantage of the rich deposits of iron ore in the area. The county was named for Dr. William Dickson, a Nashville physician. The area is also the birthplace of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

DYER

Dyer County, a large agricultural area, has long been the number one producer of soybeans in the state. Each year a local organization hosts a popular soybean festival. The county was named for Joel H. Dyer of Jackson, the owner of the McIver 640 acre land grant. Several large industries add to the county coffers.

FENTRESS

World War I hero, Alvin C. York, helped bring the people of Fentress County into the 20th century by establishing the Alvin C. York Institute, the only state-funded high school. James Fentress fought the state legislature for the formation of the county in 1823. County residents named the area after him, and its county seat, Jamestown, also bears his name.

FRANKLIN

In 1893, Robert Essary, Commissioner of Agriculture, sent a crimson clover seed to John Ruch of Belvidere in recognition of his successful farming methods. Mr. Ruch planted the seed and watched the beautiful crimson clover spread. Eventually it was grown extensively in the area and seeds were sold as a cash crop throughout the U. S. and Canada. The county was named in honor of Benjamin Franklin. The county seat is Winchester.

GIBSON

The city of Trenton, County seat of Gibson County, is home to a very special collection of porcelain Veilauses-Theieres (night-light) teapots, a gift from a native Gibson Countian living in New York. Gibson County has the oldest continuous fair in the South, dating back to 1856. The county is named for Colonel John H. Gibson, who served under Andrew Jackson in the New Orleans campaign.

GILES

Giles County reverses the memory of its stalwart Confederate hero, Sam Davis. He was executed as a spy in Pulaski, the county seat, on November 27, 1863 by the Union Army. His famous last words were, "If I had a thousand lives, I would lose them all here before I would betray my friend or the confidence of my informer." A statue of Davis was erected on the town square in 1906 by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

GRAINGER

Grainger County was named for Mary Grainger, the wife of Governor William Blount. It is the only county in the state named for a woman. The Grainger County jail is the oldest standing brick jail in Tennessee. It was recently renovated as a service project of the Extension Service Homemaker Clubs and the Historic Society and used as a community building for meetings, workshops and special community events.

GREENE

An April 26, 1783, Greene County was formed, with its name honoring General Nathaniel Greene, a prominent figure in the Revolutionary War. A short time later the State of Franklin movement began and the Greene County courthouse was used for its convention meetings. Greeneville was the capital of the "Lost State of Franklin" from 1785 to 1788. It is the birthplace of Davy Crockett and the final resting place of U. S. President Andrew Johnson.

GRUNDY

Between 1883 and 1899 Grundy County was the scene of the Lone Rock Coke Ovens, where coal was converted to coke and shipped to Alabama to be used in the steel industry. Today, Grundy County is known for its magnificent scenery, acres of bluffs, virgin timber, trails and beautiful waterfalls. Felix Grundy, Attorney General under President Van Buren, gave his name to the county.

HAMBLEN

Hamblen County is a heavily industrialized county, with more than $168 million in annual income. Its largest source of agricultural income is beef cattle and tobacco. It was the boyhood home of Davy Crockett. Morristown, the county seat, has unusual pedestrian skywalks, which were the first of that type construction in the nation.

HAMILTON

The first train chugged into Chattanooga, county seat, with great fanfare on December 1, 1849. The area grew as an industrial center, and was a strategic railroad junction during the War Between the States. Today, Hamilton County enjoys a good tourist trade, agricultural industry and recreation on the TVA lakes that provide transportation and electricity to the Tennessee Valley.

HANCOCK

The theory that the Melungeons discovered America is only one of a dozen unproven legends that surround the dark-skinned people who have lived quietly for years on Newman's Ridge near Sneedville, the county seat. They were befriended by the Cherokee Indians who gave them land. The county is named in honor of John Hancock, a member of the Continental Congress from Massachusetts.

HARDEMAN

The County was named after Thomas Jones Hardeman, veteran of the War of 1812, who served as the first county court clerk. With Boliver as the county seat, Hardeman County is the final resting place of President James K. Polk. It is also the site of the national bird dog field trials held annually in Grand Junction on the Ames Plantation.

HARDIN

Even "Yankee" children know that the battle of Shiloh was one of the fiercest and bloodiest battles of the Civil War, with more than 111,000 men participating. Union forces commanded by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant forced the Confederate Army under Gen. Andrew S. Johnson to retreat to Corinth, Mississippi. Over 3,000 killed, 16,000 wounded and 3,000 were missing after the battle. Today, the largest industry in the county is the Tennessee River Pulp and Paper Mill.

HAWKINS

In the late 1700s, the main route from Washington, D. C. to Nashville was the Stage Road which crossed Hawkins County and the county seat of Rogersville. Several of Hawkins County's roads still follow portions of this original highway. Andrew Jackson is reported to have stayed at the Rogers Tavern on many occasions. The Knoxville Gazette, the first newspaper published in Tennessee, was printed in Rogersville.

HENDERSON

Swine production contributes approximately $12 million annually to the economy of Henderson County, making it the primary agricultural income source for farmers. The county is noted for its feeder pig market, and its farrow-to-finish, purchased pigs and pure-bred operations are all significant operations in the area. Henderson County was named for Colonel James Henderson, a staff officer with Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans.

HENRY

Although Henry County is the home of three former state governors, it is most famous for being the site of the "World's Biggest Fish Fry," first organized in 1954. In the beginning, the Extension Service community clubs fried local catfish on the court square. Today the annual event attracts tourists from a wide area of the country.

HICKMAN

The county was named for Edwin Hickman, hunter and explorer, who was killed by Indians in April 1791. The county leads the nation in number of deer harvested, bringing deer hunters to the area from across the United States. Hickman's most famous personality is Ophelia Colley Cannon, better known as "Minnie Pearl" of the Grand Ole Opry.

HOUSTON

Several limestone kilns were in operation in Houston County in the 1930s and 1940s. The kilns employed over 200 workers, a large number for the county, especially at that time. The county was named in honor of Sam Houston after the Battle of the Alamo in Texas. Erin, the county seat, was founded in January 1871.

HUMPHREYS

Humphreys County is the only county in the state where railroad, state highway and river come together. The battle of Johnsonville during the Civil War is now the site of the eastern portion of Nathan Bedford Forrest State Park. General Forrest and calvary destroyed eight steamboats, 18 barges, three gunboats and many warehouses in the famous Johnsonville raid. Their intent was to disrupt Union General Sherman's supply line to his northern army in Georgia and stop the infamous "march to the sea."

JACKSON

In 1979 Governor Lamar Alexander (now President of the University of Tennessee) signed a bill declaring poke sallet as the wild edible plant of Tennessee. Jackson County salutes this native plant by hosting a poke sallet festival annually during the first week of May. Located in the picturesque foothills of the Cumberland Mountains, Jackson County was named in honor of General Andrew Jackson, famous warrior, politician and statesman.

JEFFERSON

Jefferson County was originally part of North Carolina, and became a part of Tennessee in 1796. Dandridge, the county seat, is the second oldest town in the state. Beautiful farms are anchored to the French Broad and Holston rivers. The marriage license of folk hero Davy Crockett hangs in the county courthouse museum.

JOHNSON

White pine is native to Johnson County, growing wild in many areas. More than 70 resident Christmas tree producers have grown the tree for profit, along with other ornamental trees. The white pine represents the tranquility, abundant natural resources and wildlife of the county. A early settler along the Doe River, Thomas Johnson, lent his name to the county. Mountain City is the county seat town.

KNOX

Home of the University of Tennessee and headquarters for the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service, Knoxville and Knox County are called the "Gateway to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park." Nowhere does spring make a more triumphant return than in the area, with its millions of dogwoods and rainbows of spring flowers. The William Blount Mansion and the James White Fort stand as a testimony to its place in Tennessee history.

LAKE

Indian legend related that the famous Reelfoot Lake was named after a Chickasaw chieftain with a crippled foot who kidnapped his Indian princess sweetheart from a Choctaw tribe. The earthquakes that formed the lake were Reelfoot's punishment for defying the tribal gods! Lake County is one of the most prosperous agricultural counties in the state.

LAUDERDALE

Lauderdale County is known as the "Tomato Capital of the South". The county held its first tomato festival in 1984; almost 800 acres of the county are devoted to tomato production. Produce is delivered as far north as Indiana and as far west as Texas. The Tupperware Co. has one of its three major manufacturing plants in the county.

LAWRENCE

The county was named for Captain James Lawrence, naval hero of the War of 1812, who is remembered for his "Don't give up the ship!" The county has one of the two national monuments to the Mexican War, placed in Lawrenceburg, the county seat, in honor of Lawrence County native Captain William B. Allen. One of the largest bicycle manufacturing plants in the nation is located in Lawrence County.

LEWIS

Founded in 1843, Lewis County is named for the famous explorer Meriwether Lewis who lost his life at Grinder's Inn near the Natchez Trace. The county was settled by the Swiss people whose principal source of income was from the forest and its timber products. The name Hohenwald, the county seat, means "high forest" in German.

LOUDON

The county was originally known as Christiana at its founding in 1870, but the legislature quickly changed the name. The county seat, Loudon, was first known as Blair's Ferry, with a steamboat landing and a few homes. The area is rich in archeological sites along the Little Tennessee River. It has the largest percentage of tillable land of any East Tennessee county.

MACON

In the 1800s, visitors came to the sulphur wells at Red Boiling Springs to sample the waters and take baths, believed to be a remedy for many ailments. It was a popular resort area. Nathaniel Macon, a general in the Revolutionary War and a member of Congress from North Carolina, gave his name to the county, founded in 1842.

MARION

The county lies in the beautiful scenic Sequatchie Valley, where the mountains and Tennessee River have given the area the nickname "the Grand Canyon of the South." The county is named in honor of Francis Marion, better known as the "Swamp Fox," who was famous for his role in the raid on Charleston. The county seat, Jasper, is named to honor another Revolutionary hero, Sergeant Jasper of Carolina.

MARSHALL

Jersey cows were brought to Middle Tennessee from the Isle of Jersey in 1871. The climatic conditions and favorable soil of Marshall County are comparable with those found on their home island. The Jerseys flourished in the county and are of great economic importance to its residents. UT's Dairy Experiment Station is located in Lewisburg, the county seat.

MAURY

All mule lovers know about Maury County. Mule Day began in 1840, when farmers brought their livestock to town to trade on days the court was in session. Jacks and mares were paraded along the streets for prospective buyers. This colorful tradition evolved into the present parade honoring the lowly mule of Maury County. The home of President James K. Polk stands in midtown Columbia, the county seat.

MCMINN

McMinn County ranks first among Tennessee counties in the production of Grade A milk. The Holstein cow, along with Jerseys and Guernseys, have brought national honors to McMinn County dairy producers. The county is named in honor of Governor Joseph McMinn; the county seat of Athens is named for Athens, Greece. Founders hoped the town would be the center of culture and learning like its Greek namesake.

MCNAIRY

Big Hill Pond State Park is a rustic park of upland meadow and wetland that covers 4,500 acres. South of the lake lies Dismal Swamp, which is bisected by a half-mile boardwalk. The swamp is known for its bald cypress, tupelo gum and a variety of wildlife. The town of Purdy was the first county seat; in 1891 it was moved to New South which later became Selmer, the present county seat.

MEIGS

The open water plus secluded coves rimmed by forest and farmland make the Watts Bar Lake a recreation paradise for thousands of families. Washington Ferry, the oldest in the state, operated in Meigs County. Blythe Ferry Waterfowl Management Area is a refuge for Canadian and snow geese, ducks, blue herons and deer. The county is named for Revolutionary War officer Return Johnathan Meigs, who was later the agent of Indian Affairs.

MONROE

The national capital of the Cherokee Indian Nation was once located in Monroe County. Sequoyah, the founder of the Cherokee alphabet, was born in Monroe County. The county also boasts Fort Loudon, the first planned white settlement in what was to become the State of Tennessee. More than one-third of the county lies in the Cherokee National Forest.

MONTGOMERY

Montgomery County is home to Austin Peay State University, Dunbar Cave, and was the site of the first female academy in Tennessee. Native daughter, Wilma Rudolph was the first American woman to earn three gold medals in track in a single Olympics. This Montgomery native won her medals in the 1980 Olympics and was subsequently inducted into the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

MOORE

Moore County's largest and only major industry is the world famous Jack Daniels Distillery. It is the oldest registered distillery in the United States, having been founded in the 1860s. Oak barrels used to store the Tennessee sour mash whiskey are later used for making furniture and are shipped over the world. The quaint town of Lynchburg is the county seat.

MORGAN

Historic Rugby, founded during the Victorian period by English nobleman Sir Thomas Hughes, is a tourist and cultural attraction bringing hundreds of tourists to the area annually. The community was a working town for second sons of English nobility. The county was named for Major General Daniel Morgan, noted for bravery during the Revolutionary War at the Battle of Cowpens.

OBION

Obion County began as an agricultural county and remains the largest agricultural production county in the state. It ranks first in corn, wheat and fruit production, and is third in soybeans and grain sorghum. Area industrial plants include Dixie Gun Works, the largest supplier of muzzle-loading ammunition in the U. S., and Goodyear, the largest tire manufacturing plant in the world under one roof.

OVERTON

Education was important to founding settlers of Tennessee. The arrival of Moses Fisk, a surveyor and teacher at Dartmouth College, prompted the founding of Fisk Female Academy in 1806. It was the first female school south of the Ohio River and one of the first in the nation. Livingston is the county seat, and the town square is an historic site.

PERRY

The rolling hills of Perry County are covered in stands of hardwood trees. The timber industry is one of the main economic forces in the area. Much of the logging work is done with horses, as it was years ago. In 1909, 18 sawmills were active in the county. Today there are still 15 mills. The county was named in honor of naval hero Oliver Hazard Perry, hero of the War of 1812 who said, "We have met the enemy and they are ours!"

PICKETT

Pickett County is the least populated county in the state. It is named for H. L. Pickett, who helped with the legislative bill creating the county. Cordell Hull, Congressman, Secretary of State and "Father of the United Nations," was born in a cabin near Brystown, the county seat, in 1871. His birthplace has been reconstructed as an historic shrine.

RHEA

Rhea County is one of the finest strawberry producing sites in the state. In the banner year of 1923, over 400,000 24-quart crates of strawberries were shipped by railway from the county. An annual strawberry festival honors the important role the fruit has played in the local economy. Dayton, the county seat, was the site for the famous Scopes evolution trial in 1925.

ROANE

Archibald Roane, the third governor of Tennessee, gave his name to the county. Kingston, the county seat, is the site of the Kingston Steam Plant, at one time the world's largest coal-powered facility. It provides electrical energy to area residents through the Tennessee Valley Authority hydroelectric system.

ROBERTSON

Tobacco is the leading cash crop in Robertson County, with annual revenues of approximately $20 million. Some 5,000 acres are devoted to three different types of tobacco production. Robertson County ranks among the top five counties in agricultural income for the last 20 years. The county is named for James Robertson who founded Nashville and is known as the "father of Middle Tennessee."

RUTHERFORD

Just outside Murfreesboro on the edge of an old rock quarry stands an obelisk marking the exact geographic center of Tennessee. Made of rock from the quarry, the obelisk was erected in 1976 to mark the 200th anniversary of American independence. Murfreesboro, the county seat, served as the capital of the state from 1818 - 1826. Rhea Seddon, the first female astronaut, is from Rutherford County.

SCOTT

Abundant timber on tree farms covering hundreds of acres plays an important role in the economy of Scott County. Tibbals Flooring is the largest manufacturer of solid oak hardwood flooring in the world and is the area's largest employer. The county was named for General Winfield Scott and is the home of former Senator Howard H. Baker.

SEQUATCHIE

Nestled in the beautiful 100-mile long Sequatchie Valley, Dunlap is the county seat of Sequatchie County. The contrast between green fields, woodlands, rolling hills and sharp escarpment of the mountains make the area one of scenic charm. Legend says that the name "Sequatchie" was given to the area by the Indians; its literal translation is "hog trough."

SEVIER

The Great Smoky Mountains National Park, a large portion of which is in Sevier County, is the most visited park in America. Gatlinburg, at the entrance to the park, is a widely-known tourist attraction. Mount LeConte is the highest mountain (from base to summit) east of the Rockies. The craft industry, encompassing a variety of handmade and cottage crafts, is an important economic factor. The county courthouse in Sevierville is one of the most beautiful in Tennessee.

SHELBY

The largest city in the state and Shelby County seat, Memphis, sits on a bluff overlooking the mighty Mississippi River. The county was named for General Isaac Shelby, the first governor of Kentucky, who with Andrew Jackson negotiated with the Chickasaw Indians for western Kentucky and Tennessee. Shelby County is the most populous in the state, with chief agricultural crops of soybeans, hay, cotton and livestock.

STEWART

As part of the TVA system of dams for flood control and hydro-electric power, the Johnsonville Steam Plant is one of the largest in the world. Sitting on the banks of Lake Barkley near Cumberland City, it employs a large number of residents and has contributed significantly to the financial strength of the county. The county name honors one of the earliest settlers in the area, Duncan Stewart, who owned vast tracts of land in the county. Fort Donelson National Military Park is a Civil War landmark.

SULLIVAN

Sullivan County combines the advantages of a large city with the best of small town life. Bristol's State Street is split in two, half in Tennessee and half in Virginia. Sullivan is the fifth largest populated county in the state and Tennessee Eastman is the state's largest employer. Bristol holds the title as birthplace of country music; the first country recording was made there.

SUMNER

Sumner County was a part of North Carolina in 1786; it included Smith, Macon and Trousdale Counties. It became a part of the newly founded Tennessee in 1799. Wynnewood at Catalina Springs was built in 1828 as a stagecoach inn and mineral springs resort. Now a state historic site and national historic landmark, it is believed to be the largest standing log structure in the state.

TIPTON

A familiar sight during harvest season in Tipton County is truckload upon truckload of baled cotton from one of the many cotton gins. Approximately 85 percent of the county's total acreage is devoted to farming; corn, soybeans, wheat, grain sorghum, hay and lespedeza are other principle crops. The county name honors Captain Jacob Tipton, who fell in St. Calair's defeat near Fort Washington in 1771.

TROUSDALE

Trousdale County is the smallest in Tennessee. It is known for its Southern hospitality and neighborliness. A farmers' market failed because residents wanted to give their surplus produce away rather than sell it. Hartsville, the county seat, has the oldest tobacco market in Middle Tennessee and was the scene of the Hartsville horse races in the early 1800s, frequently attended by Andrew Jackson.

UNICOI

Both national and state fish hatcheries are located in the county seat of Erwin. These hatcheries supply the streams for Tennessee and other states, as well as conducting research for other area hatcheries. The first name of the county was "Una wah," which was the Indian name for the Unaka mountain range. Unicoi was the pronunciation in the Indians' native tongue. The Appalachian Trail passes through the county.

UNION

This East Tennessee county has a rich musical heritage. Both Country Music Hall of Fame honoree Roy Acuff and the internationally acclaimed guitarist Chet Atkins are Union County natives. The county was named because it was a "union" of five segments of the adjoining counties of Grainger, Claiborne, Campbell, Knox and Anderson.

WARREN

Warren County is known as the "nursery capital of the South." Nursery production is the single largest source of agricultural income in the area. More than 400 certified nursery producers in the area culture more than 1500 varieties of ornamental plants on 30,000 acres. Through modern packing and shipping facilities, products move to all 50 states and several foreign countries. The county was named for the American patriot, General Joseph Warren.

WASHINGTON

In 1770, a bill was passed by the North Carolina legislature to establish a courthouse west of the mountains. An enabling act was passed a year later to build the town of Jonesborough. The current courthouse is the fifth to be built on the site. Washington College Academy was the first school in Tennessee. Andrew Jackson studied and passed the bar while living in Jonesborough, the oldest town in Tennessee. The county was named for George Washington and founded in 1777.

WAYNE

The Rock Courthouse at the entrance to Natural Bridge is the site where the Cherokee and Creek Indians once held their councils of war, smoked their peace pipes and held their last desperate meetings to discuss President Andrew Jackson's order to leave their native land. The county was named in honor of General "Mad Anthony" Wayne of Revolutionary War fame. Davy Crockett was elected a magistrate of the county.

WEAKLEY

Most of the sweet potato slips produced in the United States are grown in Weakley County. The sweet potato even has its own newspaper, known as "Taterman." Five county mines process and ship more ball clay than any other county in the United States. The largest tree east of the Mississippi River, a cypress, grows in the county. Robert Weakley III, who served in the first state House of Representatives and fought in the Revolutionary War, lends his name to the county.

WHITE

The Old Stage Road and the Wilderness Trail both pass through White County. Rock House is one of the few remaining structures left standing on the Old Stage Road between Knoxville and Nashville. It was originally used as a toll house and was constructed between 1835 - 1839. Famous county residents include Lester Flatt, country/bluegrass musician; Carl Rowen, syndicated columnist; and George Gibbs Dibrell, a Civil War general. The county seat is Sparta.

WILLIAMSON

Scores of well-preserved antebellum homes grace Williamson County's tree-lined streets and countryside as memorials to its rich heritage. Among them is the Carter House, caught in the swirling center of one of the bloodiest battles of the War Between the States, and "Carnton," a stately house on whose columned porch lay the bodies of five Confederate generals, casualties of the Battle of Franklin. Tennessee's oldest weekly newspaper, The Review Appeal, was established in Franklin in 1813.

WILSON

To the early settlers, this area reminded them of the dense cedar forest which existed in the Biblical land of Lebanon. The Tennessee cedar is not a true cedar, but a juniper, a close cousin. The Cedars of Lebanon State Park was established in the 1930s as a reforestation project of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The county was named for Major David Wilson, a member of the state legislature at the time of the county's founding in 1799. Sam Houston practiced law in the county seat town of Lebanon.
